SYNOPSIS

In the Ching Dynasty in China, the scriptures of the temple were much revered. A buddhist priest named Hung received permission from the head of the temple to take the scriptures to the Southern China, to preach there.

He arrived at the temple to collect the valuable document from Ah-Kong, and soon after leaving he was attacked by Dai-kiang's henchman, Wah-sang. He stole the scriptures in the thick of the fight.

Priest Hung manages to escape and meets a fellow Northerner, Huang, and they plan to retrieve the temple's most precious secrets.

Huang goes to the temple and discovers who stole the scriptures. The head priest makes him learn the deadly techniques of Magic Kicks before he goes after Dai-kiang.

Huang is joined in his quest by Chin-chin who wants to avenge her fathers' death. On the way, Huang is trapped by one of Dai-kiang's daughter, but is rescued by another, Chin-chin, who doesn't want to be married off by her father to an old man.

Huang kills the old man, but he and Chin-chin narrowly escape death at the hands of Dai-kiang's men.

They realize they must improve their kung-fu before they can kill Dai-kiang. Encouraging each other, they practice hard and new styles of fighting are attained. After great effort they succeed to defeat Dai-kiang's palace guards, and they complete their mission in a bloodbath of violence. They kill Dai-kiang and retrieve the scriptures.
