SYNOPSIS

During the Ming Dynasty, a eunuch called His-Chang harbors rebellious intentions, and holds a kung-fu contest in a bid to gather the very best fighters. Bloodthirsty battles are fought, and finally Kao Kua-Tien emerge the overall victor. His prize is a sword, the World's very best.

However, Kao Kua-Tien refuses to work for the eunuch, and his entire family is slaughtered by His-Chang's right-hand man, Tien-Hu. Through some sort of miracle, Kao's daughter, Kao Ying-Lan is rescued by her nanny, and brought under the protective wing of a shaolin master named Han-Yu.

Han-Yu brings her up and teaches her all his best kung-fu techniques. After twenty years under the master, she begins her quest for revenge. To avoid immediate recognition by Tien-Hu, she gives herself the nickname of the Mistress of Verity Lodge. She is joined her fight against her father's murderers by other girls who are skilled in the marital arts. The first task she sets herself is to kill one of Tien-Hu's men, Shih-Ye.

This she accomplishes, but Tien-Hu begins to suspect her real identity, and Shih Ye's son is also after her for revenge. Now and then, she encounters challenge of mysterious people but always a strange young hero helps her out.

The priest, Han-Yu, knows that Kao Ying-Lan is in trouble and sends his best Shaolin student, Kang-Lung, to her rescue. Finally, Tien-Hu finds out who the Mistress of Verity Lodge really is, and plans to kill her. He arranges a final duel at the Stone Pagoda, but Kang-Lung turns up with Kao so that he can help her.

The two masters stand little chance against the superb techniques of the tricky Tien-Hu, but the finally meets his end after a spectacular fight.

Han-Yu the Shaolin master then turns up to congratulate his two students. Through his wisdom, he knows that it is Buddha's will that Tien-Hu is destroyed by Kao Ying-Lan and Kang-Lung.
