SYNOPSIS

Tong-hung and Tao-Kong are famous for their "Stone Fist" style of kung fu fighting. They join together to be masters of "Double Hand Stone Fist" kung fu, making them totally invincible.

Later, they fall out with one another, become enemies, and fight, resulting in the death of Tong. Twenty years after this argument, the son of Tao-Kong, Tao-Wu-Sun, approaches Win-ling-ho and earns his keep as a fighter.

However, Win is crippled and his only interest is paying people to fight while he watches. All the champions of these fights are later mysteriously killed by Mu-Dik.

Tao-Wu-Sun is an expert in "Stone Fist" kung fu his father taught him. One day, by chance, he meets the son of his father's old enemy Tong-hung. His name is Tong-Ka-Luk, who has been resenting about Win's man.

Even though his father, Tong-hung, was such a brilliant "Stone Fist" fighter, Tong-Ka-Luk himself is mediocre. Tong becomes extremely angry when he finds out that Tao is not only the son of his father's old enemy, but is also one of Win's fighters. Tong plans his revenge, fights with Tao, but loses.

Win-ling-ho and the famous bandit Ma-Dik have been friends since Mu rescued him after an accident. The two of them had stolen precious antique from the Palace long ago, and are now selling them through trade links they have made.

One evening, Tong-Kai-Luk's friend is injured whilst visiting Win-ling-ho. Tong suspects Tao-Wu-Sun and they fight. Again, Tong loses to Tao. Tong goes searching for his teacher and practices new techniques hard, aiming at avenging. These he succeeds and Tao congratulates him for his achievements.

Tong then finds out that Tao has really been sent by the Government to collect evidence to arrest Win and Ma. Tong and Tao later join forces to fight Ma and Win in a final life-and-death battle.
