When a good fight is eminent, they pretend to be fierce warriors and readies for battle. Whenever they are caught in a tough situation, their young leader claims to be the very disciple of the legendary kung fu master, Li Tieh Sheng of "Numerous Boxing," which scares their enemies away. Little do the Thunder Kids know that the great Chiang Nam kung fu master himself helps them out at one point, though he did not know they were using his name at that time. Thus, in the kung fu master's good name, The Thunder kids help the poor fight against greedy gangsters. They bring back money for the needy and defend the honor of the peasants. But the villains eventually grow smart and plot against them. The gangsters trick them into causing mischief, and soon the Thunder Kids find themselves enemies of the people, bringing trouble to the good and helping the gangsters. Adding onto that, the real Li Tieh Sheng eventually learns of his ruined name and shows up to bring justice. But will he punish the Thunder Kids or will he side with them against the villains in the name of honor?
