One man fights to live.
The other lives to fight.
The battle will end up in death.

It's a matter of honor.
It's a battle of life and death.
Survival is the only way to beat the game.

SYNOPSIS

Frank Walker has had his brother murdered so that he can take over his share of the company. Jenny, his niece standing with him, controls the remaining shares. Frank has staged his own death in a car accident which actually killed his driver. That way he can maneuver behind the scenes to get what he wants.

When he finds out that Jenny is planning to sell her shares to his brother's partner Charlie Bernard, he has her kidnapped and forces her to hand everything over to him. He is failed, however, by Jenny's dear friend master fighter Jackie.

Frank further uses his influence to control Charlie's underground boxing operation, a cut-throat world of brutality and greed. The key players are Plato, the crazed Asian killer and his henchman Steve; and Mickey, the washed-up ex-champion and his loyal friend Jim, a fierce fighter from Sydney.

When Plato succeeds in challenging Mickey to a fight, Mickey is killed. Now it is up to Jim to take up the mantle to defeat the seemingly unbeatable Plato. Meanwhile Jackie exposes Frank's deceitful plan, rescues Jenny and in a furious battle which almost kills him, defeats Frank.
